BURMESE OPPOSITION UNITES FOR FIRST TIME TO PRESENT COMMON PLATFORM FOR TRANSITION TO DEMOCRACY

Prime Minister in Exile and Members of Opposition Groups Present Program for Democratic Transition to UN Security Council, Secretary General for Transmission to Military Regime

August 6 – United Nations, NY – The Prime Minister in Exile of the National Coalition Government of the Union of Burma, and officials of the National Council of the Union of Burma, will present to the United Nations tomorrow, August 7th, the first united program for transition to democracy in Burma, asking the UN Security Council and Secretary General to transmit the program to the military regime in Rangoon.

The Proposal for National Reconciliation Towards Democracy & Development in Burma is the result of an unprecedented alliance of pro-democracy parties and ethnic groups both those exiled and within Burma, who have agreed on a fully-fledged program for a transition to democracy. The program sets out clear and detailed steps for the necessary transition to democracy in Burma, in dialogue with members of the military regime. The Burmese opposition will brief the UN press corps tomorrow on the detailed policy program.

According to Prime Minister Sein Win: “This assembly of opposition and ethnic groups presents a turning point in Burmese history. For the first time, we have all come together to agree on a common platform for transition to democracy in Burma. The program offers a clear and peaceful route forward, that can be achieved in dialogue with the military regime. We are asking the United Nations and the international community to ensure that the regime engages in this dialogue, so that at last democracy and stability can be achieved in Burma.”
